Arbuckle Technology Society Meets Here Monthly

Kelvin McMillan, (above) the hospital's laboratory director, presents a slide program on the hospital lab. Roland Stolfa (right) demonstrates his 'gun case' amateur radio system.

What Is It?

Arbuckle Technology Society (ATS) is a group of science and technology enthusiasts in southern Oklahoma and north Texas.

The hospital hosts the Society every month in the emergency communications room in the Therapy Building. The next meeting is 6:30 p.m., July 28. Visitors are welcome to come and enjoy a one hour program or demonstration in science and technology.

Show And Tell

ATS members are "tech savvy." They cross-educate each other in subjects such as electronics, robotics, physics, computer networking, amateur radio, meteorology, astronomy, storm spotting, and disaster preparedness.

Find out more about ATS on Facebook at Arbuckle Technology Society or on the web at www.arbuckletechnologysociety.com.
